MIGRANT AND REFUGEE SUNDAY HUMAN BEINGS ON A SPIRITUAL JOURNEY

John the Baptist had been told to watch out for the Spirit of God. Somehow now he recognised the Spirit of Jesus. Somehow he knows that new person, Jesus, will give the spirit to all. We call it the Holy Spirit. The Spirit of Jesus.

We talk of team spirit, the spirit of generosity in a family. We have a spiritual life. We are more than we seem, more than a body. We are made for an eternal relationship with God, which begins now.

On Migrant and Refugee Sunday, we think of the situations of asylum seekers and refugees. Many different kinds of asylum seekers have come to our country. These are people who are often treated badly in Ireland in a system that seems not to be changing. These are people who for reasons of great danger cannot go back to their own country. They show us the spirit of courage in the decision a parent has to make to bring their family to another country for a better life, or the spirit of sacrifice that people make in detention centres and refugee camps.

We pay tribute also to volunteers and statutory workers who do their best for our refugees.

The Spirit is freely given to all of us. John recognised that in Jesus, and at Pentecost the new community of followers welcomed the outpourings of the Spirit. With God's help we can do the same: we can recognise the spirit in us all, on our human journey of life.

Think of the footage of refugees on TV;
ask for the generosity to welcome them.
Holy Spirit, influence for goodness all I do and say.

Gospel Reflections for Sundays of Year A:

The Word of God in Church

When we make a visit to the Church outside of Mass it is desirable that we can have easy access to the written Word of God. To facilitate that, a small book stand has been placed in Mater Dei and St Joseph's Churches containing Catholic Bibles in different translations, along with copies of the Book of Psalms and also the Morning and Evening Prayer of the Divine Office. Some biblical commentaries, which give explanation of the texts will be added and rotated from time to time. Parishioners are invited to make use of this facility within the Church rather than take the books home so that as many as possible can avail of the Scriptures.
